

Bruised petals, the frightening scars of violence against women

These visualizations show some anonymized data received from the New Caledonia South Province Domestic Violence Treatment Service Le Relais, concerning women under 30 who were victims of abuses. (2008 → 2024)

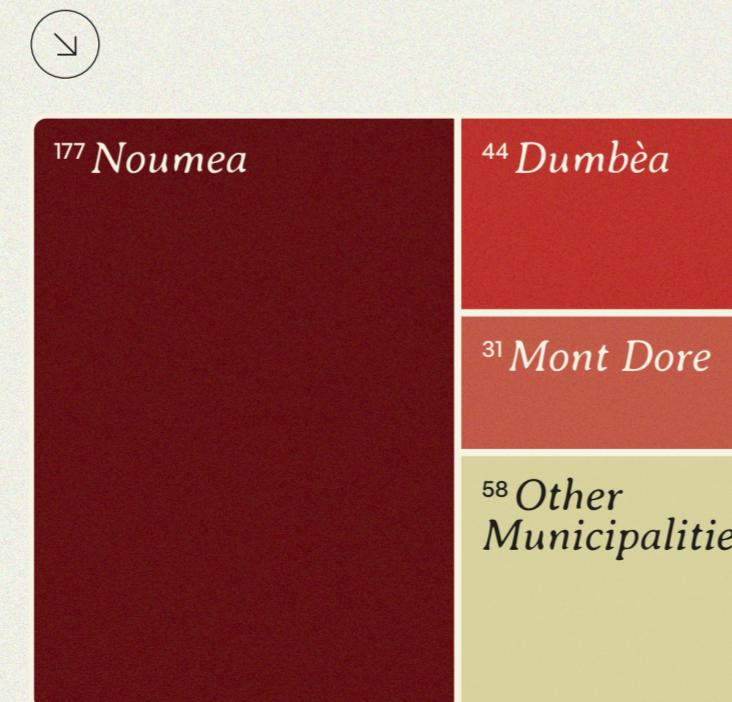

PLEASE DON'T HURT ME

The network displays all the women (each represented as a flower) who have reported one or more acts of violence they have experienced. From the viz, we can observe that physical, verbal, and psychological violence are the most frequent types. It also reveals that many women report multiple types of violence, underscoring the severity of the issue.

FROM WHERE I RAISED MY VOICE

In the South Province of New Caledonia, the municipalities with the highest number of reports coincide also with the most populous cities.

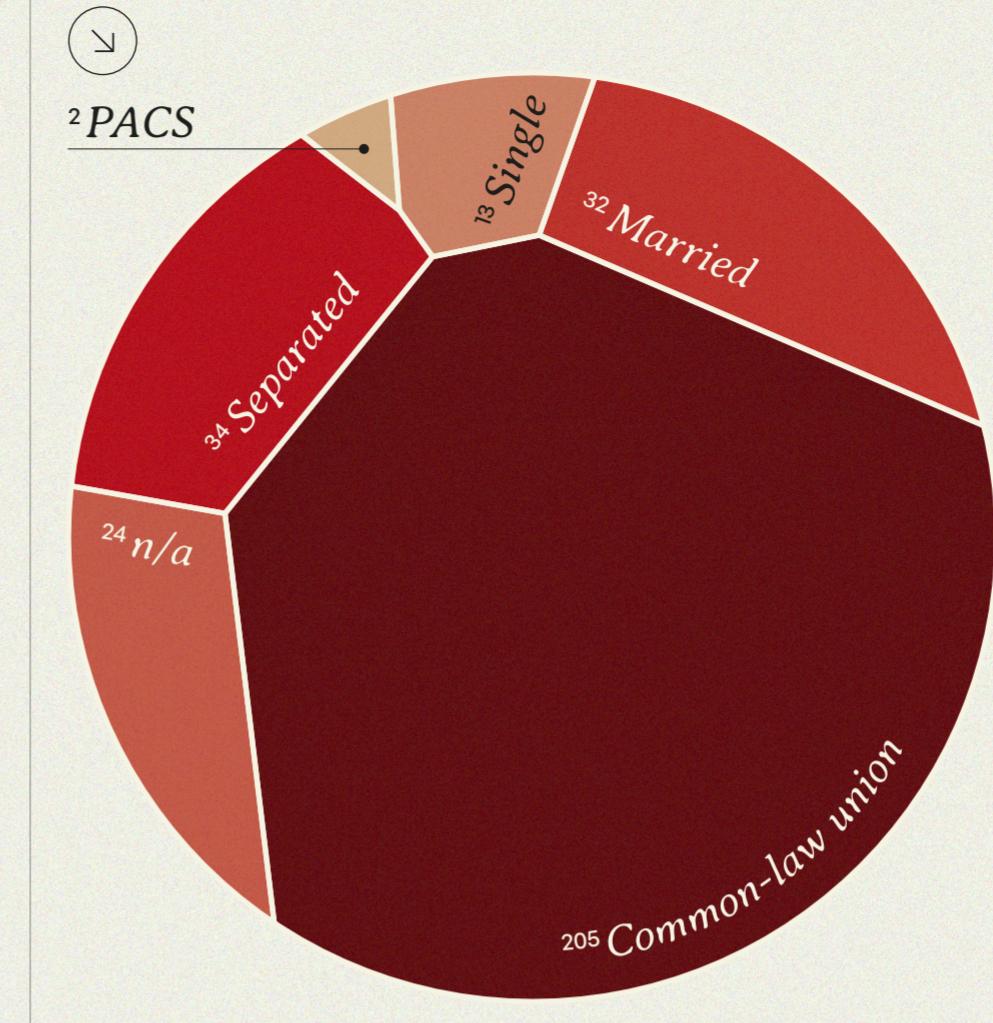

SOURCE & CREDITS

Domestic violence in South Province of New Caledonia
<http://data.gouv.nc>

Project by Alessia Musio
alessiamusio.com

IN TWO, IT'S WORSE

Most women who reported experiencing acts of violence were living with a partner, with 2/3 in common-law unions. Only 13 of them were single.

WHO I RELIED ON

The women who decided to speak out approached the following institutions, with the vast majority placing their trust in the court. Below, we can see the breakdown of all the minor institutions.

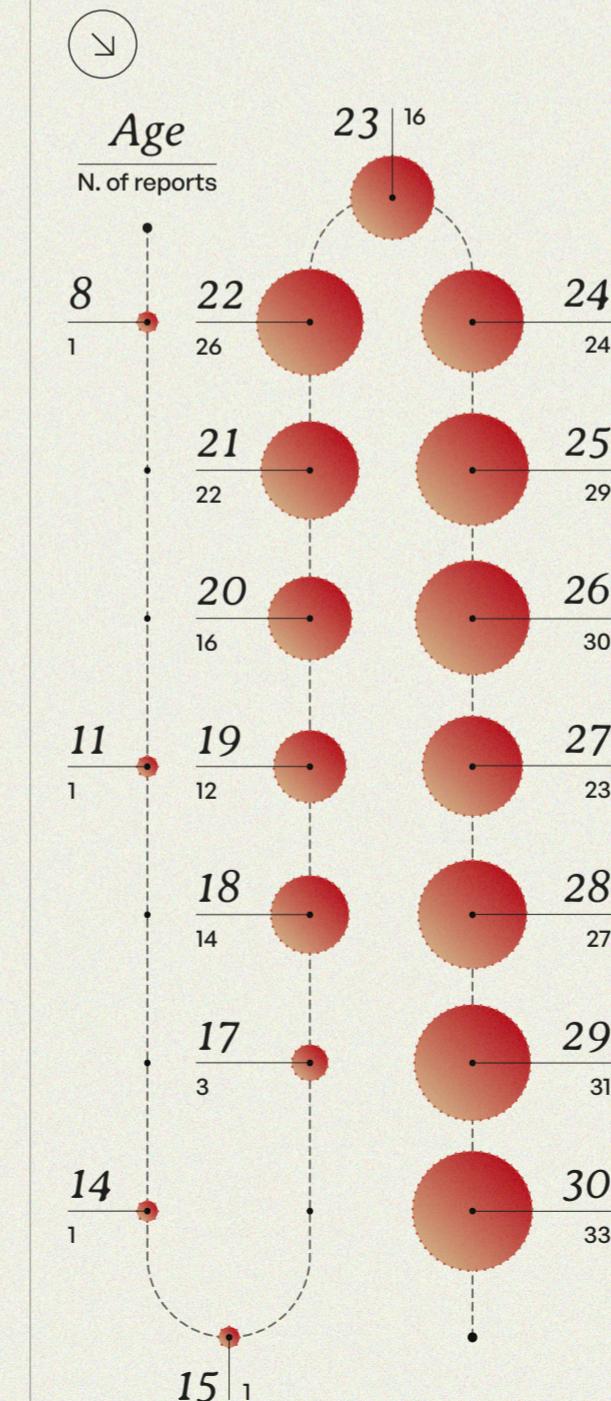

240 Court

16	Entourage
11	Social workers
8	n/a
6	Healthcare professionals
6	Police
6	Services Province Sud
6	Spontaneous
3	Accommodation and social reintegration center
3	Gendarmerie
3	Women's rights and equality information center
2	Associations

SO AFRAID OF GROWING UP

As expected, the number of reports rises with age, making growing older a concerning experience.

I DON'T FEEL AT HOME

The visualization displays all women, categorized by housing situation, who reported violent episodes between 2008 and 2024. There is a gap during the COVID period, but it is not possible to determine whether this is due to a decrease in violence or in reports.

